

Capability Brown: Perception and Response in a Global Context

9th - 11th September 2016
The University of Bath

An ICOMOS-UK Conference in collaboration with the University of Bath, supported by The Gardens Trust, Historic England, The National Trust, and the ICOMOS International Scientific Committee on Cultural Landscapes

The Capability Designed Landscape of Prior Park, Bath

Capability Brown changed the face of 18th-century England. Yet he left little written explanation of his work. Much must be inferred from his surviving landscapes and by seeing his work in the wider context of the naturalistic style that developed in Europe and further afield.

This major conference, organised by the Cultural Landscapes and Historic Gardens Committee of ICOMOS-UK (International Council on Monuments and Sites UK), will be one of the highlights of the first-ever national Capability Brown Festival, providing an international dimension to complement the UK's national festival of events, openings, exhibitions and publications.

Over a three-day conference in the historic city of Bath (one of the UK's World Heritage Sites), world-renowned researchers and practitioners will present Brown's work in a global context and explore the ways in which it has been interpreted over the last 250 years. The conference will include evening receptions at Prior Park, the Brown designed valley garden with its iconic Palladian bridge overlooking the city, and at the Bath Assembly Rooms. There will also be a tour of Brown's landscape at Croome Court, recently restored by the National Trust. Conference papers will be published for delegates in a special edition of Garden History.
